

Kris Savage

11:10

How are you going Sandra

Sandra

13:38

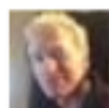

I'm doing ok so far thanks Chris. Had some blood tests done and Cancer markers were 12, which is in the No Cancer range, so I was pleased with that. I'm starting to regain strength and endurance which was badly missing. This has only started in the last few weeks, and as I sleep on the Biomat every night, I put it down to that.

Kris Savage

15:11

That's excellent would love to catch up on skype if possible

Kris Savage

15:27

Do you have any paperwork from the doctor confirming you had cancer

Sandra

15:32

Yes I do. I had a small tumor removed in August last year, followed by 6 weeks of radiotherapy, and then they wanted me to take Femara tablets for 5 years. I took the tablets for 3 months, and started getting aches and pains all over and could barely walk, so I stopped. Now I do things my way.

Kris Savage

15:33

Brilliant would you mind if I helped others with your testimony

Sandra

15:36

No I don't mind at all, I only wish I hadn't panicked at the time and went with the conventional medicine. I have never felt so completely on my own, and of course I clung to the Doctors, but now I realise I was just a Cashcow.